

Voluntary contributions to the Scheme

Introduction

The Trust Deed of your Scheme permits active members to make voluntary contributions to the Scheme subject to the approval of the Trustee. Active members must contribute voluntary contributions through the FENZ payroll system.

Voluntary contributions do not attract an employer subsidy from FENZ.

How to make voluntary contributions

Members wishing to make voluntary contributions on a regular basis must first contact the Trustees seeking approval to make contributions.

The necessary arrangements will then be made on behalf of the member to commence the voluntary contributions.

The maximum amount of voluntary contributions is set by regulation at 10% of a member's superable salary. Members can contribute less than this amount or they can cease for a period as decided by the member and recommence at a later date.

In all cases where a member wishes to change the arrangements related to their voluntary contributions they must seek the approval of the Trustees to do this. Again they should contact the Trustees.

Access to voluntary contributions

Voluntary contributions made to the Scheme by active members – those employed by FENZ and making regular contributions through the payroll system – are not available for withdrawal by members until they are no longer employed by FENZ.

What are the investment returns?

Voluntary contributions receive the same gross and net investment returns as all other funds held in the Scheme. There is only one annual net rate of return for each investment options declared by the Trustee for the Scheme each year.

Are there any costs?

The administration costs and tax payable by the Scheme for each financial year to 31 March are deducted from the Scheme's gross investment returns. These costs apply to all funds within the Scheme.

Following that calculation the net rate of return is applied to all accounts, irrespective of their status, held within the Scheme by all members.

The Scheme makes no extra charge for investing voluntary contributions on behalf of members.
